Spa Time Baby offers towel cape to make bath time more comforting

Spa Time Baby recently introduced its Cozy Care Cape to make bath time a relaxing, nurturing, and pampering experience, according to Leslie Barile, one of the company’s founders.

The caregiver wears the cape during baby’s bath with the waterproof panel facing in to prevent splashed water from soaking through. When baby’s bath is done, the caregiver simply gathers baby in her arms against the cape and wraps the baby in the absorbent terry cloth. Baby can be patted dry with the Cozy Care Cape while he or she is held securely in the caregiver’s arms.

The Cozy Care Cape snaps around the caregiver’s shoulders and eliminates the need for the caregiver to tuck a towel under his or her chin or in his or her shirt and also keeps the caregiver dry with the exclusive waterproof panel. At the same time, the caregiver’s body heat naturally warms the towel.

Made of 100 percent soft absorbent cotton terry cloth, the capes are machine washable and dryable. The waterproof panel is made with polyurethane laminate, a soft polyester knit fabric that is used to make modern day cloth diapers. One size fits most individuals.

The Cozy Care Cape is wholesale priced at $19.50 and the minimum order requirement is 3 items. Purchase of an initial cape allows the retailer one free cape.
